

2012 Harriet Kirk Crago Faculty of the Year – Dr. Sarah Mallonee

We recognized a very special teacher this year with the Harriet Kirk Crago Faculty of the Year Award --- Dr. Sarah Mallonee. Sarah has been a part of the IRSC family since starting as an instructor in June of 2005. In 2008, she was promoted to Assistant Professor. Today, she serves as an Associate Professor and Department Chair in the English, Communications and Modern Languages Department.

Sarah is a vibrant, dynamic teacher who goes to extraordinary lengths to help her students, as well as her colleagues. As a new Department Chair, Sarah is proving to be an innovative leader who bridges gaps between different subject areas – and different personalities – with skill and grace. She is a great listener, advocate and mentor. It goes without saying that she is also a valued member of our College and our community. Her hard work and commitment to student success is easy to recognize in the way her students respond to her instruction.

Some of the remarks from students include:

“Dr. Mallonee is a wonderful and engaging professor.”

“I came out of each class having learned something new.”

“Dr. Mallonee is a fabulous professor; she’s amazing.”

“Dr. Mallonee was a joy to produce writing assignments for!”

“Dr. Mallonee is the best English professor by far.”
